

The Landmarks of the Long Path

There are 84 Landmarks on the Long Path of New York between Gilboa and Whiteface Mountain. These are major features to be found along the Path and all are worthy of attention. A few of them are small villages where the traveler can stock up on food and other essentials but most of the others are unusual and of geologic, historic, natural, scientific or geographic uniqueness. They may be visited in sequence or separately and thus can lend themselves to an expedition of weeks in duration or of a single day.

Most of them are about three miles apart, a few of them are within a mile of each other. The greatest intervening distance is less than seven miles.

Since these Landmarks are the only markers identifying the northern section of the Long Path of New York, it is planned eventually that a distinctive marker will be placed at each of these eighty-four locations.
