

40. Mt. Pleasant Glass Factory Site

This Landmark may seem to be a strange place for locating a glass factory. However it originally was located in the heart of a dense woods. Since fuel for melting glass was a major problem in the early period of working glass, it was a very logical choice for locating such an enterprise.

As might be expected however, once the wood supply in the near vicinity of Mt. Pleasant was exhausted, the other factors of the isolation of this place led to its abandonment.
