

Horicon Cemeteries to Explore

1. Adirondack/Millbrook

On Johnsbury Rd, east of its intersection with Valentine Pond Rd in Adirondack, visible from the road.

2. North Brant Lake

On Beaver Pond Rd, north of its intersection with Palisades Rd, visible from the road.

4. Brant Lake

On State Route 8, next to the Horicon Historical Museum, visible from the road.

5. South Horicon

On South Horicon Cemetery Rd, about 1/4 of a mile from its intersection with Hayesburg Rd, visible from the road.

3. Underwood

On Valentine Pond Rd, just past its intersection with Shaw Hill Rd, visible from the road.

6. Frasier

On Hayesburg Rd, about a 1/2 mile north of its intersection with Granger Rd, not visible from the road, stairs up to the cemetery.

Horicon Historic Markers

1. House 1840

On Church St in Adirondack, close to its intersection with Red Wing Rd. Built in 1840, this structure is the oldest house in Horicon. It was once owned by Edwin Bush, who was the Superintendent of a big tannery in the hamlet of Adirondack. At the tannery, hides were tanned into leather using the bark of Hemlock trees. The house is still standing and is privately owned.

2. Horicon Grist Mill

On State Route 8 in Brant Lake, across from Market St and Mill Pond. This site was once a grist mill built in 1865 by Jud Barton. It was operated by he and his sons until 1937 and was powered by water from the outlet of Mill Pond.

3. Heintzelman Library

On State Route 8 in Brant Lake, on the south side of Mill Pond, across from the Brant Lake Town Hall. This stone and wood building was built in 1907 and housed the Horicon Library. Some years later, the Town of Horicon assumed responsibility of the building. After the new Horicon Free Library was built in 2001, this building became the office of the town historian as well as home to historic archives of the town.

