

How to Print and Assemble the First Wilderness Letterboxing Trail Passport

SUPPLIES NEEDED:

- Paper
- Printer
- Adhesive spray or glue stick (if not printing double-sided)
- An awl, hole punch, or needle
- 16" of yarn, string or thread

1. Print this document with landscape orientation. If your printer can print double-sided, print double-sided and flip on the short edge.
2. Cut out all of the pages following the corner crop marks. Do NOT cut along the middle. When you are finished, you should have 10 double-sided rectangles with two numbered pages on each rectangle if you printed double-sided, or 20 rectangles with two numbered pages on each rectangle if you printed single-sided.
3. If you did not print double-sided, glue pages back to back, with the right sides facing out. Make sure both sides are lined up and have the text facing the same direction.
Glue the following pairs of pages to each other:
 - a. Cover/back cover to page 2/39
 - b. Page 3/38 to page 4/37
 - c. Page 5/36 to page 6/35
 - d. Page 7/34 to page 8/33
 - e. Page 9/32 to page 10/31
 - f. Page 11/30 to page 12/29
 - g. Page 13/28 to page 14/27
 - h. Page 15/26 to page 16/25
 - i. Page 17/24 to page 18/23
 - j. Page 19/22 to page 20/21

4. Stack all the pages on top of each other, starting with the cover/back cover face down. Stack page 4/37 facing up on top and continue with 6/35, 8/33, 10/31, 12/29, 14/27, 16/25, 18/23 and 20/21 on the top.
5. Using an awl, a heavy duty needle, or a hole punch, make four holes at the location shown in the center of pages 20/21. You may need to do half the pages at a time to make it easier. If you do separate the pages to make holes, make sure you stack them back in the correct order facing the correct direction.
6. Fold the pages in half to make a book.
7. Use 8" of yarn, string, or a thread and needle to go down through one hole at the top and up through the other. Tie a tight knot and cut off the excess. Repeat a second time for the set of holes at the bottom. Alternately, explore simple bookbinding tips at this website: <https://incredibussy.com/easy-book-binding-two-ways/>
8. Your passport is complete! Go out and have some letterboxing fun!

What is the First Wilderness?

"Wilderness is not a luxury, but a necessity of the human spirit"
- Edward Abbey

The Adirondacks were the first place where Americans realized that wilderness was going to be a distinguishing and permanent feature of their civilization. By the 1890s, the Adirondack Park was created as the largest protected wilderness area east of the Mississippi. Since then, the Adirondack Park has challenged each generation to define the role of wilderness in our increasingly urbanized civilization.

The First Wilderness Heritage Corridor unites communities along the Upper Hudson River in celebrating their shared history along the earliest route into the heart of the Adirondack Mountains.

What is Letterboxing?

Letterboxing is a fun treasure hunt activity, incorporating orienteering, art, and puzzle solving.

Letterboxing got its start in 1854 in England, when a National Park guide placed a jar for visitors with his calling card inside, and an invitation for those who found the jar to leave their own cards. After awhile, visitors started leaving postcards or notes in the jar, and the next visitor would return them by mail. ("Letterbox" is the British term for Mailbox.).

Eventually, instead of calling or postcards, visitors started using hand-carved rubber stamps to leave their mark in a logbook, which is the current practice today. After an article in Smithsonian Magazine in 1998, letterboxing caught on in the U.S., and there are now over 90,000 active letterboxes in North America.

Letterboxing in the First Wilderness

At each letterboxing site in the First Wilderness, you will search for a hidden, weather-proof box, with a logbook, a hand-carved stamp, and an inkpad. Use the provided clues, which are in the form of a riddle, to help find the box. Once you find the box, use the stamp to mark this passport. Leave a note, along with your own stamp if you have one, in the logbook. Make sure to return all items to the box and hide it back carefully where you found it for the next adventurer. It's a good idea to bring your own inkpad, if you have one, just in case the one in the box is missing.

Remember to leave no trace, stay on the trail, and check for ticks.

In 1797, the Woodward family bought a tract of land near Warrensburg full of trees that loggers sought.
Mr. Woodward nearly sold a large white pine to pay for dishes
But Mrs. Woodward proclaimed,
"No, that is against my wishes."
As you trek along this trail,
closely read all the signs;
keep your eyes open for the most special of pines.
Near the 300 year old beauty, you'll find a box under the walkway.
Now you've neared the end of the trail,
What a lovely way to spend the day!
