and
Vision for the Role of the
Joseph Warren Museum

Currently on Exhibit at the Warren County Historical Society
50 Gurney Lane, Queensbury

The centerpiece of the exhibit

The "Signers of Liberty" oil on canvas painting by Howard Chandler Christy is a portrait of patriots assembled in the manner of John Singleton Copley's "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence" (1776). Seated at the table are the following signers: Dr. Joseph Warren, Paul Revere, John Adams, Sam Adams and John Hancock.

Mission

- The museum would function as an interpretive guide, not only for the life and death of Dr. Joseph Warren, but his overlooked importance to the ideals of pre-Revolutionary America as well.

Education

- We plan to partner with local high schools and SUNY Adirondack to develop an intern program, possibly offering course credit for hours spent at the museum.

Study and Debate

- To utilize the museum as a venue for study and debate, on not only topics pertaining to the Revolution, but on current topics as well.

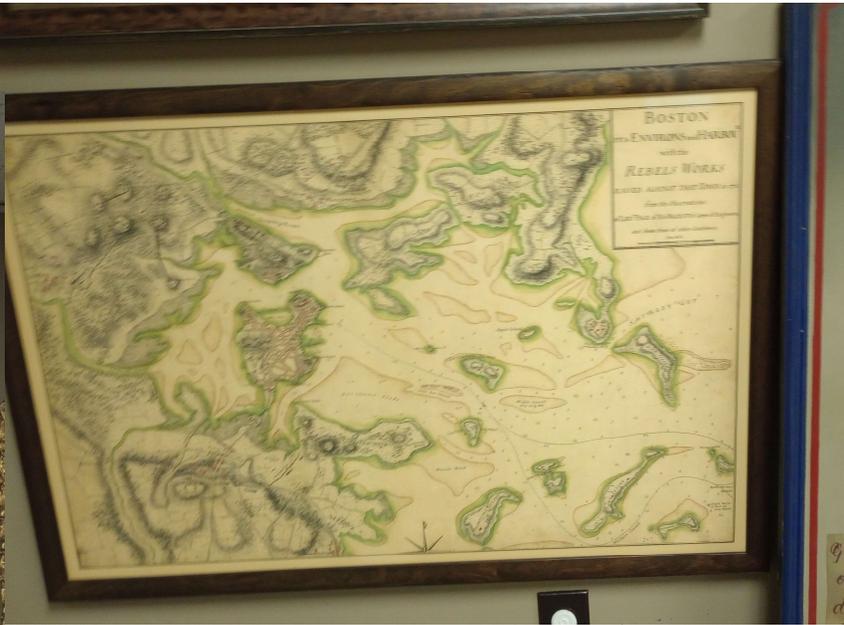

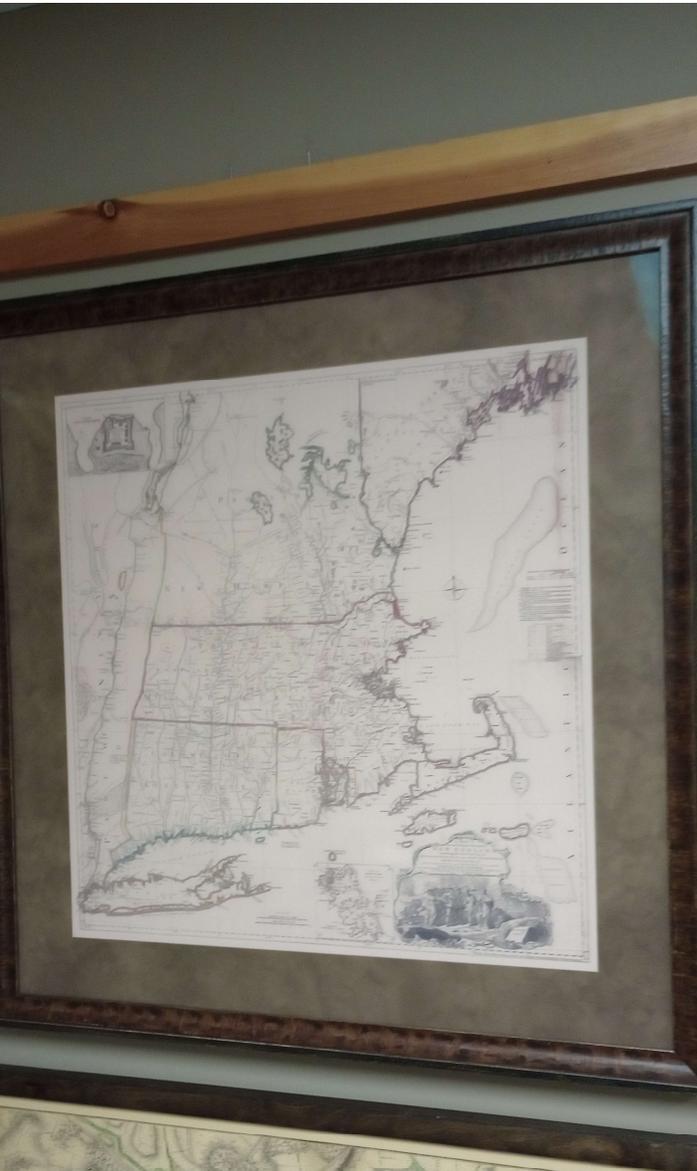

Leadership

- Our plan is to offer a neutral forum for many topics, unfortunately neglected, such as Civics and the Responsibilities of Citizens, and The Constitution: It's Creation and Articles, to name a few. Local community and education leaders would be encouraged to lead seminars.

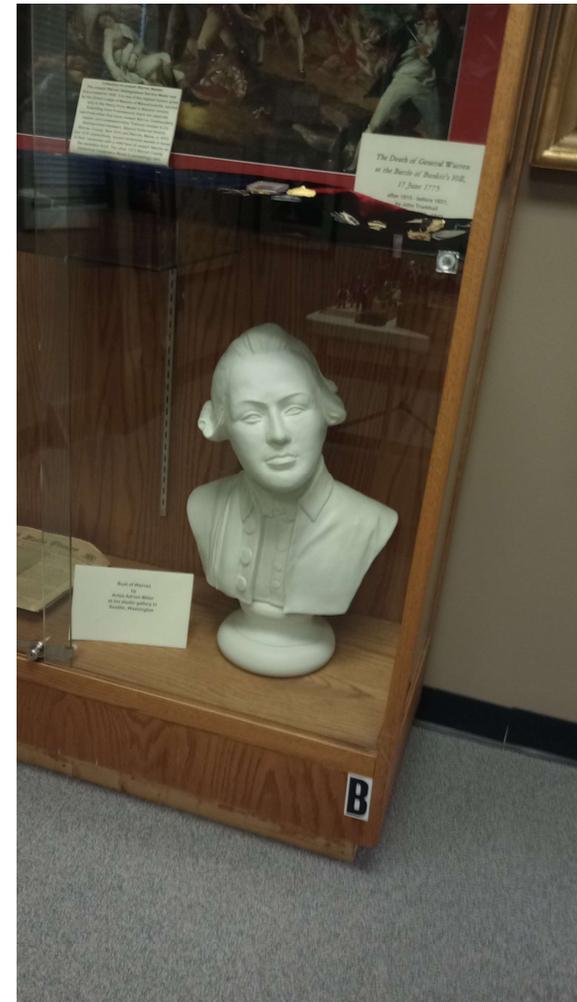

Warren was a noted orator and a key member of the Sons of Liberty

We plan to gradually develop a library with research capability to aid in historical research, at first in Revolutionary history, then in partnership with Warren County Historical Society, local history as well, with the goal of attracting local and national historians offering programs on Dr. Warren, the Revolution and the American Experience in general.

Masonic Medals and Bust of Dr. Warren

Tourism

- It will help to promote Tourism in Warren County by offering an additional historically themed destination, further satisfying the reported 39% of tourists seeking another cultural destination.
